Lenten Season Drives Aristocrats to Continent.

KING EDWARD GOES ABROAD

Cannes, as Usual at This Period, Is Crowded - Wealthy Class Spends Time at Golf and in the Municipal Casino-Monte Carlo Season Not as Good as in Former Years,

London, March 9 .- The absence of the King, and the fact that Lent is on, has most depleted London of its aristocratic residents, and the resorts of the Continent are consequently benefited. The Italian Riviera is becoming increasingly popular with English people, and few places have gained more in favor than San Remo. Many of the villa holders are British born, and half the hotel lists are made up of Anglo-Saxon names, Cannes is, as usual at this season, crowded with the English aristocracy. One of the popular amusement resorts there, next to the celebrated golf links, is the Municipal Casino. People have adopted it, for it offers something worth having or seeing every twenty-four hours. Indeed, if the management goes on in the way it has begun there is no reason why the Casino should not become as much a feature of Cannes life as the golf club is, It is the more likely because there is a well-bred air about the entertainments, and at present, at all events, a marked absence of the giddy element common to the public resorts of Nice and Monte

Member of German Reichstag Charged with High Living, While Poor Colleagues Cannot Even Buy Meat-Herr Singer Implicated in Charges-Both Declare Innocence,

Berlin, March 9.-The amenities of German political life are illustrated by a controversy regarding Herren Singer and Bebel, which is largely occupying a number of political journals in Berlin and the provinces. Shortly after the Kaiser's birthday, on January 27, a press agency, called the "Information," announced that on the evening of that anniversary one of their reporters saw the two Socialist leaders in a restaurant, engaged in drinking champagne with a third individual unknown to him. The Nationalist press pounced on this as a tasty bit of news, dressed it up spicily, and remarked on the strangeness of the circumstance that leaders of socialism should drink champagne in expensive restaurants while so many of their poorer comrades were unable to buy meat for their families. Was this champagne drinking compatible with

In the Vorwaerts, Herr Bebel angrily rejoined that there was not a word of truth in the story, and that it was the invention of an enemy. The "Information" now categorically asserts that its reporter was not mistaken, and that he adheres to his statement. He knows the appearance of Herren Bebel and Singer quite well, and repeats that they were drinking champagne in a restaurant the name of which he gives.
